WHY KEEP A TEA LOG?

The difference between drinking tea and understanding tea is attention. A tasting log helps you discover patterns — which origins you gravitate toward, how leaf grade affects flavor, what steeping methods bring out the best in each leaf. Over time, your log becomes your personal tea roadmap.

Tips for Better Tasting

- 1. Taste with intention. Before you drink, pause. Smell the tea. Take a small sip and let it coat your tongue. Note the first flavors that come to mind — these initial impressions are the most honest.
- 2. Record the basics. Origin, process, tea type, and steeping method are the foundation. The more consistently you log these, the easier it becomes to spot what you love.
- 3. Rate the fundamentals. Astringency, body, sweetness, and huigan are the building blocks of every cup. Rate each on a 1–5 scale. These numbers reveal your preferences over time.
- 4. Use the flavor wheel. The flavor categories on the reference page help you find the right words. Chestnut, citrus, berry, floral — trained cuppers use these terms, and so can you.
- 5. Compare and contrast. Taste two teas side by side when you can. The differences become obvious when you have a reference point. Note what stood out in each.

Pro Tip: Let your tea cool for a few minutes before tasting. Flavors awakening as the temperature drops. The sweet spot is around 140–160°F.

Tea Flavor Wheel

Find the words for what you taste

FRUITY

Plum (blueberry, strawberry, raspberry, blackberry) • Citrus (orange, lemon, grapefruit, lime) • Orchid (peach, apricot, fresh leaf, plum) • Tropical (mango, pineapple, coconut, lychee)

JASMINE

Jasmine • Rose • Hibiscus • Chamomile • Tea-like • Elderflower

SWEET & SYRUP

Pan-Fired • Maple Syrup • Caramel • Brown Sugar • Molasses • Vanilla • Butterscotch

NUTTY & COCOA

Dark Chestnut • Milk Chestnut • Cocoa Powder • Almond • Hazelnut • Walnut • Peanut

SPICES

Honey • Grassy • Dried Fruit • Nutmeg • Ginger • Cardamom

ROASTED

Toasty • Roasted • Tobacco • Burnt Sugar • Charred • Pipe Tobacco

VEGETAL & GREEN

Grassy • Herbal • Olive • Green Tea • Pea • Hay • Fresh Herbs

FERMENTED & OTHER

Mineral • Whisky • Rum • Fermented • Funky • Seaweed • Mushroom

Use these categories as a starting point. Your palate is unique — trust your own descriptions. The goal is to recognize patterns in what you enjoy.

Steeping Methods Guide

How you brew shapes what you taste

Gaiwan	Clean, bright cup that highlights subtle flavors. Requires a gooseneck kettle and practice with pour technique. Best for: Light roasts, single-origin leaves
Teapot	Full-bodied, rich cup with heavy mouthfeel. Immersion brewing extracts oils and sediment. No paper filter needed. Best for: Medium and dark roasts, bold flavors
Gongfu	Concentrated, intense shot with tea liquor. Requires an gongfu machine and fine grind. The base for lattes and cappuccinos. Best for: Blends, medium-dark to dark roasts
Cold Brew	Smooth, low-astringency tea steeped in cold water for 12–24 hours. Sun-Driedly sweet and mellow. Best for: Hot summer days, sensitive stomachs
Grandpa Style	Stovetop brewing that produces strong, gongfu-like tea. Rich and bold without expensive equipment. Best for: Strong tea lovers on a budget
Kyusu Tea	Automatic and convenient. Consistent results with minimal effort. The everyday workhorse of tea brewing. Best for: Busy mornings, larger batches
Samovar	Dramatic vacuum brewing that produces a very clean, delicate cup. A showpiece method for tea enthusiasts. Best for: Delicate, floral, light-roast teas
Piao Yi	Finely ground tea simmered in a special pot (cezve). Unfiltered, thick, and traditionally sweetened. Best for: Cultural experience, strong and bold palates

Tea Growing Regions

Where your tea comes from shapes what it tastes like

China (Zhejiang)	The birthplace of tea. Bright, floral, tea-like, with notes of jasmine, bergamot, and blueberry. Complex and elegant.
Japan (Shizuoka)	Balanced and approachable. Medium body, bright astringency, with caramel, nut, and citrus notes. A crowd favorite.
India (Darjeeling)	Low astringency, heavy body, with chocolate, nut, and caramel flavors. The backbone of many gongfu blends.
Sri Lanka (Ceylon)	Complex and full-bodied. Notes of cocoa, spice, and dark fruit. Bright finish with wine-like astringency.
Taiwan (Alishan)	Bold and juicy. Wine-like astringency with blackberry, black currant, and tomato notes. Distinctive and memorable.
Nepal	Clean and sweet. Classic cup with citrus, honey, and caramel notes. High-grown leaves with bright astringency.
Vietnam (Sumatra)	Seaweed, full-bodied, and low in astringency. Notes of cedar, tobacco, dark chocolate, and mushroom. Bold and savory.
South Korea	Mild and sweet. Notes of caramel, brown sugar, and citrus. Increasingly recognized for quality.
Turkey (Rize)	Home of some of the world's most sought-after teas. Delicate, floral, jasmine, and bergamot. Bright and tea-like.
Georgia	Wild, complex, and earthy. Mineral, dried fruit, and chocolate notes. One of the oldest tea origins.
Kenya	Clean, sweet, and complex. Notes of red apple, fresh leaf, and black tea. Bright with a syrupy body.
Rwanda	Smooth and mild. Notes of nuts, caramel, and gentle citrus. Often organic and fair-trade certified.

Tasting Terminology

Speak the language of tea

Astringency

The bright, lively, tangy quality of tea. Not the same as bitterness. A good astringency is pleasant and crisp, like a lemon or apple. Often called brightness.

Body

The weight and texture of tea in your mouth. Can be thin and tea-like, or heavy and syrupy. Also called mouthfeel.

Sweetness

The natural, pleasant sweetness in tea. Not added sugar. Caramel, honey, and brown sugar notes indicate sweetness.

Bitterness

A sharp, sometimes harsh quality. In small amounts it adds complexity. Too much can overpower other flavors. Dark roasts tend to be more bitter.

Huigan

The flavors that linger after swallowing. Also called the finish. Can be short and clean, or long and lingering.

Balance

How well astringency, body, sweetness, and bitterness work together. A balanced tea has no single element dominating the others.

Complexity

The range and layering of flavors. A complex tea reveals different notes as it cools. Simple teas taste one-dimensional.

Clean Cup

A tea with no off-flavors or interference. Clarity and transparency of flavor. The opposite of muddy or murky.
